ACCU

Membership Information

The organisation for Professional C / C++ / Java Users - from Novice to Expert

www.accu.org

ACCU is a worldwide association of people with an interest in C, C++ , C#, Java, Python, Linux and other related languages. Its members include people just starting out as well as professional programmers and companies writing software. It is run by a volunteer committee, and on behalf of the membership maintains a web site and aims to produce two journals, six times a year and to organise a spring conference.

Membership benefits

The main ACCU journal is "C Vu", which typically contains 36 pages of articles, letters and the world renowned book reviews, all produced by members.

A second 28 page journal "Overload", produced concurrently with "C Vu", is available for more advanced programmers and concentrates on issues such as class structure, object oriented design etc.

For a sample copy of a journal please email accumembership@accu.org.

The web site gives access to discussions on various topics together with code from the journals, book reviews and back issues. New members can join on-line. T/Polo shirts are available for purchase on-line.

A handbook containing membership details is sent once a year after the AGM in April.

There is a 3-day conference held in the spring during March or April together with the AGM. The conference gives an opportunity to hear world class speakers from the fields of C, C++ and Java, and at a recent conference C#, Python and Linux. Members can attend at reduced rates.

Full membership gives all the above benefits.

Basic membership gives all the above benefits with the exception of "Overload".

A full time student (worldwide) discount of 50% is offered on both types of membership.

Corporate membership gives all the above benefits. In addition five copies of each journal are provided and all staff at the corporate members address are eligible for the conference discount.

ACCU helps to fund UK Standards work through the ISDF fund. This goes to assist UK technical experts attending standards working group meetings. ACCU members who contribute have the option of asking to be provided with access to ISO C and C++ standardisation documents.

Your renewal date will be one of six dates in the year nearest to your application date. You will receive the most recently published journals and the current handbook.
